OCTOBER 28, 2012

“If I am only for myself, then what am I? And if not now, when?” - Rabbi Hillel

When the topic of stewardship comes up, most people think of giving of themselves: their time, their talent and their treasure. It touches every aspect of our lives. But how much does it really touch our lives? An oft-cited adage is that we spend our personal resources on what we consider a priority in our life. “For where your treasure is, there your heart will be also” (Mt.6:21) Often that means we concentrate our personal resources on establishing our future – getting an education, getting the best job we can, getting the best living situation we can, providing for our families. Those are certainly all worthy pursuits. But how do our choices reflect our stewardship of God’s gifts in service to God? Often, we relegate our time, talent and treasure on His behalf after we have allocated our resources to our other priorities.

If we are in keeping with the biblical meaning of stewardship, we give proportionately from our first fruits, not just what is left over. We are all expected to give of all three fruits, not just the one we have in abundance. So while at certain stages of our lives we may feel that we have more talent but can’t give any of our time or treasure, or more time but can’t give any treasure or talent, what God asks of us is to give to the extent we can of each. And we can always give some level of each. It is easy to say, “Others have more talent than I do. My talents are not very useful,” Or to say:” I am just too busy right now; I will have time to give to others when I finish my degree.” Or, “I will give treasure once I am set in a job / I have finished paying off my student loans / I am in a home / I have my children’s educations covered/ I have enough for retirement.” In other words, we can easily adopt a mentality of “me first.”

The real issue of stewardship is this: Are we managing our resources as though they are ours or as though they are God’s? Our lives are shaped by the decisions we make and the priorities we choose. As good stewards, we are asked to thank God for the gifts we have received from His bounty by returning a portion of the time, talent and treasure given to us. It’s a way of life that asks: what talent can I share, what time can I share and what treasure can I share? As Catholics, we are challenged to choose stewardship as a lifestyle based on our baptismal call. Stewardship leads to a deeper relationship with Jesus.

Many of the students in the Catholic Community at Stanford are very generous with their unique gifts and talents, and some give of their time as well. Normally, however, most of us feel the constraints of both time and treasure: we often feel we do not have enough. It is true that we all are unlikely to have enough time and treasure to accomplish ALL of the things we would like to do. So the question is: what is the most important to you? How will you feel that you have made a mark on this world? Will it be by pursuing your goals first, or God’s? When you project to the end of your life, what do you hope you can look back upon as having contributed? A kingdom for yourself? Or helping build God’s kingdom? Your answer to this question will determine how you manage the time, abilities, and money God has placed under your care.

So this is what we ask you to do. First, we ask each of you to review prayerfully your financial situation and commit to a monthly financial donation. No gift is too small. Then we ask you to go to our website where you will see a link to becoming a recurring donor through PayPal. By setting up a recurring donation, you will become one of our Living Faith Society members. Not only will you be supporting your Catholic campus ministry, but you will also receive the Living Faith daily devotional each quarter. The devotional provides a different scripture verse and short meditation for each day of the year.

Now And Forever: The Communion Of Saints And The Afterlife

Rev. Nathan Castle O.P., Campus Ministry at Stanford University
The Saints aren't just dead heroes. They're eternally living companions for those on the earthly journey. "Communion" means to be one with. How can we be one with all or any one of them in our day to day lives? Come find out and share the stories of how we Catholics do that.

Rev. Nathan Castle O.P. is originally from Groves, Texas. He graduated from Trinity University in San Antonio and entered the Dominican order in 1979. He has served in campus ministries in California and Arizona for the last 23 years. Prior to coming to Stanford he spent 12 years as Director of All Saints Catholic Newman Center serving Arizona State University, and is past chair of the Executive Board of the Catholic Campus Ministry Association. You can check out his new book: And Toto, Too: "The Wizard of Oz" as a Spiritual Adventure, on Amazon.

All Saints Day Masses:

The Feast of All Saints falls on Thursday, Nov. 1.
